

Careers · External candidates

Feedback and hiring process outcomes

Waiting for an answer is one of the hardest parts of any hiring process. This page explains exactly what to expect from us: when you'll hear, who you'll hear from, and what we do and don't share.

You will always hear back. If you took part in any stage of our process, you'll know the outcome. We don't leave people waiting.

1 Frequently asked questions

When will you hear?

As soon as the decision on your application status is made. If the process takes longer than expected, your recruiter will let you know.

Who tells you, and how?

In most processes, you'll hear from our recruiting team via email. In processes for more senior roles, if you reach the final technical stages, your recruiter will call you to share the news personally.

Does Nubank share detailed interview feedback?

No. We don't share detailed feedback about individual interviews. This applies to every candidate, in every process, at every level. It's how we keep the process consistent for everyone.

Can I ask my recruiter for feedback anyway?

Your recruiter will answer your questions about the process, the role and next steps. What they won't do is comment on your performance in specific interviews — by phone or in writing. It isn't reluctance; it's the same rule for everyone.

Does no feedback mean I did badly?

No. The decision is about the role: what it requires right now, and how that meets — or doesn't meet — where you are in your career. It isn't a judgment about your ability.

Can I apply again?

Yes, and we're glad when people do. Our teams grow quickly and roles change. It's worth keeping an eye on our careers page.

Thank you for considering Nu.

The future is purple.